

ADDED SUGAR CONTENT OF FOOD CHEAT SHEET

Do you Know How Much Added Sugar is in Your Food?

Ideally, we limit our added sugar intake to no more than 5% of total calories. For a 2,000 calorie diet, that's 25 grams or less per day. For a 1,600 calorie diet, that's 20 grams or less. Even lower is better. Remember the more added sugar you eat, the more likely you are to crave it!

Where can I find added sugar on food labels?

Unfortunately reading the label won't always help, because labels show you only the total carbohydrate and total sugar content. Total carbohydrate includes not only sugar, but also complex carbohydrates such as those found in grains and starchy vegetables like potatoes. Total sugar is made up of naturally occurring sugars like those found in fruit and some vegetables. Dairy products also contain naturally occurring sugar in the form of lactose. For most desserts and non-fruit juice based beverages, the total sugar content will be all added sugar.

What qualifies as added sugar?

Added sugar refers to any sugar that is added to a food or beverage. The naturally occurring sugar in fruit or fruit juice, for example, is not considered added sugar. The sugar in sodas, other sugar-sweetened beverages, desserts, sweetened yogurts, cereals, and granola bars are all added sugar.

You will find sugar has many different names. Make sure to check the ingredient list to see if a food has added sugar. Remember that ingredients are listed in order of amount, so if any form of sugar is close to the top of the list you can bet that it's pretty heavily sweetened.
